Remembering today...
Walter Partymiller

Walter Partymiller was born to Maurice and Elice Walters Partymiller. He was born in Seattle, Washington.

Walt started drawing in high school and studied at the University of Washington and Cornish School of Art and Music in Seattle. Following a trip to New York to pursue his art at the American Artist School and returning to Seattle, Partymiller sent his work to The Gazette and Daily which later became the York Daily Record. Following World War II, Partymiller was hired in York to draw his editorial cartoons. When interviewed by the Daily Record in 1986, Walt said, "I always wanted to make a difference-to make the community and the nation a better place in which to live."

Walt was a very friendly, happy person who got along well with young people. He taught art classes to seventh through ninth grade students at the York Art Association, water coloring classes to York College of PA students, and volunteered every Monday with Martin Library's reference department. He would also visit York Vo-tech where he enjoyed working with the students. The student loved him dearly.

Walt's later years were surely among his happiest, thank to his devoted wife Nellie Anna.
